FOREWORD

The following is a selected bibliography of historical, scientific, military and journalistic documents which relate to the broad subjects of Prisoners of War and the Political Use of Hostages. Though interim, it is circulated in this form as a partial response to the many students of human events who have requested source materials in their pursuit of understanding the changes that have occurred in international affairs over the recent years in which human beings are increasingly the coerced victims in a conflict of systems -- acknowledged or undeclared.

Associates of the Monroe Corporation have been involved in studies of one aspect or another of the behavioral problems in POW matters for over three decades. Under contract with the Air Force Office of Scientific Research, we are engaged in an analysis of the implications of long term captivity for training in the Air Force. This interim report will also aid in furthering the planning of that project and eliciting further suggestions for increasing the scope and utility of the listing. As the work continues, supplements to the bibliography will be published. Emphasis will be placed upon scientific and scholarly publications of both domestic and foreign scholars, which are not covered with completeness in this interim report.
